INAUGURAL SECURITY PRACTITIONERS AWARDS 2019 NOMINATION CRITERIA AND NOMINATION FORM

INTRODUCTION

On 11 July 2018, MHA and IMDA jointly launched the IDP for the private security industry. Minister for Manpower and 2nd Minister for Home Affairs, Mrs Josephine Teo at the launch announced the government's plans and support for the industry. The IDP was an enabler to mitigate the manpower shortage faced by the industry and compromising its service outcomes. One viable option was digitalisation of the industry. This was not a new idea to the security as it has been encouraged to embrace technology to face the insurmountable challenges and the changing landscape faced by the security industry. This was further plagued by the higher demands by the stakeholders as a result of threatening and devastating turn of events globally.

WHY SPD - A DAY DEDICATED TO SECURITY PRACTITIONERS

- With the strong call by the government, heighten security threats and ever-changing expectations of the security service buyers, the security industry needs to buckle up and meet the fast changing landscape.
- It is paramount for the security industry to gear up and be ready to face with the changing security environment. As expected some of the industry stakeholders readily accepted the introduction of technology and the need to changes, whilst others were either obstinate or resistant to engage.
- To those who readily accepted and embraced changes, are feeling more calm and composed and their willingness to procure and engage high end complicated technology which yields better security outcomes and eases their operation effectiveness, efficiency and capabilities. They are duly recognised and pave their way for securing more outcome based contracts.
- Cost savings for the security buyers and enhancing security capabilities and outcomes for the security agencies is a good marriage that provides the best desired outcomes. This calls for the enhancing of skill sets to hone their skills and capabilities to match the state of the art, complicated and sophisticated security equipment that is continuously entering the security market.
- In view of the foregoing, ACSA is desirous of acknowledging and recognising individuals and companies/organisations in the security industry as well as other sectors for playing a pivotal
